

PICC is Becoming Community Controlled

The Palm Island Community Company – known as PICC – is changing its governance structure and constitution to be controlled by the local community.

This fundamental change has been in the planning for a number of years, and we are excited to be moving to a community-controlled model.

What does this mean?

PICC is changing its structure and constitution so that it will be controlled by the local community.

Why change?

The change recognizes that the community wants greater self-determination.

What will change?

There will be a new company that only has Palm Islanders as members. All of PICC's services, workforce and assets will transfer to the New Company so services will continue to operate and all staff will keep the same jobs.

How will the New Company Operate?

Name of the Company

The New Company will retain the name of Palm Island Community Company (PICC)

The main object of the Company is to promote and advance the empowerment, health, well-being, sustainability of the Manbarra and Bwgcolman peoples.

A Member of the Company must be a Manbarra or Bwgcolman Person aged 18 years or over. PICC staff may be members but cannot vote in Board elections.

Board membership

There will be between five and seven directors

- Up to four elected by members
- One Traditional owner
- Up to two additional Directors appointed by the Board

The Chairperson will be one of these directors and is elected by the Board.

The constitution details the eligibility requirements for directors that aim to ensure diversity, integrity and a mix of skills needed to govern the organisation and ensure it stays strong. These include:

- No more than one member of a family on the board at one time
- No elected or senior managers from national, state or local government
- No PICC staff members.

When will the change happen?

The change will commence as soon as the Queensland Government agrees to transfer its share to the New Company. It is expected that the New Company will be fully operational from mid-2021.

What happens next?

Once the Queensland Government confirms a decision to transfer their PICC shareholding to the New Company, the work will begin on:

- Information and consultation with staff and the community
- Legal changes to PICC constitution and name changes so the New Company name changes to the Palm Island Community Company.
- Transferring funding agreements and other legal agreements to the New Company
- Transferring employment of staff to the New Company
- Recruiting community members to the New Company.

PICC Now	New PICC
Shareholding Company	Membership –based company
Shareholders include: • Queensland Government • Palm Island Council • Community Shareholders	Community Members only
Board Nominated by Shareholders	Majority of Board (up to 4) elected by community members: One nominated by Traditional Owners and Board can appoint up to 2 others to fill skills gaps

